

DP the Top Picker; End of the MIP?

KS Maintains His Lead Heading into Week 12

Effective date: 2016-11-22

Week 11 may have brought us the sweetest fruit; I am of course referring to the end of the MIP. Membership had a significantly more productive week than in Week 10, with the majority of membership picking above the .500 mark and more than half of membership picking successfully in the double digits. With the MIP potentially behind us, and the league heading back into a 16 game schedule starting in Week 12, these final six weeks promise to be exceptionally competitive, as the field remains relatively tight.

DP was top dog this week with his 12 winners. Well picked! Will DP get hot and claw his way back to make a run for the elusive back to back championships? I'm no fortune teller, so we'll have to wait and see. Our top 3 (KS, LF, SR) who have been holding steady for the last several weeks, remained steady in Week 11 and nobody moved an inch. SS made some movement however, joining the 11-win crowd and picking up a couple games on MS, with whom SS is now tied for 4th place, at 6 games back.

As mentioned above, there is a whole heck of a lot of football left, so plenty of room for movement. I hope that everyone has a very healthy and happy Thanksgiving, and for those of you traveling, travel safely. Speaking of Thanksgiving, friendly reminder that there are three games this Thursday, so get your picks in.

Happy Picking.

JP